The Gulf Stream and Europe.

There was a time when the human epoch, says James G. Thompson, in an article on "The Gulf Stream and the Panama Canal," when the European climate was so genial that many delicate southern species of plants flourished luxuriantly in regions where they cannot now exist. Thus in the neighborhood of Paris, the fig tree, the laurel of the Canary Islands, and other Southern species, found a congenial habitat. The Canary Island laurel does not grow further north now than near Toulon, on the borders of the Mediterranean. It flowers in winter, and repeated frosts would therefore prevent its reproducing its kind. That this plant formerly flourished near Paris is thus a striking proof of changed climatic conditions, for the winters in Northern France must then have been extremely genial. The land and fresh-water shells which were contemporaneous with that remarkable flora in the North-western Europe tell precisely the same tale, and this is still further illustrated and confirmed by the character of the mammalian fauna. Among the commoner animals at that time occupants of England, France, etc., were hippopotami, elephants, rhinoceroses, lions, tigers, hyenas, etc., and vast numbers of cervine and bovine animals which still occupy the temperate latitudes of Europe.

That such genial climatic conditions were due in large measure to a great increase in the volume of warm water flowing into the North Atlantic seems just as certain as that the Arctic climate of the glacial period was largely induced by a very considerable decrease or even an entire stoppage of that heat-bearing current. The presence of many Mediterranean shells in the ancient raised beaches of Scandinavia, the occurrence of mussel banks in the coast-lands of Spitzbergen, the appearance here and there off the coasts of Scotland, the Faeroes and Iceland, of Southern species of shell-fish, and the presence of isolated colonies of Southern species among the icebergs and the icebergs of the Gulf of St. Lawrence, are all indicative of a former much greater influx of warm water into Northern regions than is now the case. Those remarkable colonies of Southern species among the icebergs and the icebergs of the Gulf of St. Lawrence, are all indicative of a former much greater influx of warm water into Northern regions than is now the case. First Temperance Law.

The following extract from Hon. Chas. B. Flood's correspondence to the Cincinnati Enquirer, under the date of the 10th inst., shows how Ohio's first temperance legislation under the present Constitution was adopted: "The passage of the first temperance law afforded an illustration of the want of good faith which not infrequently shows itself in legislative action. It was a majority of the votes of the members elected to each branch of the Legislature to pass a bill, and in all cases the years and days are required. The temperance law was being passed--the years and days were being passed--when the Clerk discovered a member, pencil in hand, keeping count of the vote. The member had evidently been drinking, and although the call was made slowly and distinctly to give the member a chance to keep a correct account, yet he missed it by one vote. When his name was called he did not vote; when called a second time, after all the other members had voted, he did vote, and his vote passed the bill. He thought it required, as it did by his count, two votes to pass it; but, too far gone in his cups to count correctly, it required but one, and when he voted in its favor that one vote was supplied, and the temperance bill was passed. Some of his indignant friends rushed to his seat and rudely demanded that he move a reconsideration, but the demand was made in such a manner as to excite the anger of the member, and he refused. This was the first temperance law under the present Constitution passed by the vote of a member in a situation too far gone to count the number of Senators voting."

A Singular Gypsy Tribe.

A wandering tribe, which has caused some curiosity in Madras, may possibly be identified with a singular class of Gypsies known by the name of Mayas, who visited Lakshmi in 1868, and a curious and interesting account of whom is published in a memorandum written by Dr. Leitner, and printed by the Punjab Government. In that year a large crowd of them arrived on foot and in carts from Afghanistan, and encamped for some little time in that place. They spoke a peculiar jargon among themselves, though when within earshot of Europeans and Indians they spoke Persian. At first, it seems, there was a difficulty in identifying them, their place of abode, but officers from various parts of India affirmed that the noisy and quarrelsome strangers were in the way of passing periodically between this country and Central Asia, and that they had an unpleasant habit of looting villages on their route. Mayas were always armed on reaching the Indian frontier, a fact for which they accounted by saying that they were Shiaks, whom, as every one knows, their Sunni co-religionists sometimes sell as slaves. "When," says Dr. Leitner, "I visited their encampment, their frantic gesticulations and the hailing of children by one woman to another in order to emphasize her rage, reminded me of a scene recorded in my account of the Gypsies of Turkey when a case was decided in favor of that side in a tribunal constituted of the most celebrated and most closely used the strongest expressions while advocating their own cause." Others of the same tribe appear to have visited Lahore in 1870. Their Central Asiatic home is said to be Khokan, and it seems that their journey from one country to the other and back extends over many years. A partial vocabulary of the dialect of thieves' Latin used by the Mayas has, we believe, been compiled by Dr. Leitner. Civil and Military Gazette.

PICTURESQUE BANDIT.

The Thorough and Artistic Way in Which They Try These Tricks in Mexico. It is a picturesque sight to see a band of Mexican "banditti" galloping down a mountain path on magnificent horses; their large Mexican hats, trimmed with gold and silver, shading their faces, their pantaloons buttoned down the side with large silver buttons; their pistols in their belts behind, their swords at their side, and their "serapes"--a sort of plaid thrown over one shoulder and hiding their entire face with the exception of one eye, which glances furtively on the unfortunate passengers of the diligence they are about to rob. Their captain gallops at their head and shouts imperiously to the driver of the diligence to "stop." In one trip in which I encountered them there was a lady among the passengers who was a handsome young woman rather tight for her finger. In her fright she could not get it off, and one of the brigands said to his leader: "Captain, the lady cannot get her ring off. What are we to do?" To which the Mexican "Bandido" answered very coolly: "Cut her finger off."

You can easily imagine the cold shudder that ran through us all. Fortunately she at last managed to get the ring off, and we were not forced to witness an amputation. In another journey a more amusing incident occurred--there was a Bishop in the diligence, and they robbed him of his ring. When they had got through their operations, and taken everything of value we had, they knelt down and asked the Bishop to give them his blessing. He told them it was impossible to bless them without his ring, hoping in that way to get possession of it. They returned him the ring and he solemnly blessed them, but when he had done so they again took his ring and galloped off with it, leaving his Grace in the middle of the road exclaiming: "Banditti, good Lord! they have robbed me even of my blessing!"

Robberies on the Vera Cruz road at that time were daily occurrences, and as the brigands possessed themselves of the passengers' clothes they very often sent them from the diligence in the Hotel. Inhabited men and women arrive completely naked. An Englishman said to me once: "I generally travel with two or three copies of the London Times. You know it is a very large newspaper, and in case of a robbery I can send them from the diligence in the Hotel. I have taken all my clothes, by Jove! the Times might be useful."

The cause of Adeline Patti's breaking her engagement to come to Mexico with Manager Maretzky twenty years ago was that she had heard of the robbery of the Vera Cruz road. The story is told in the Times might be useful. Wedding Pipes.

The city of Gouda, so famed for the old stained glass in the cathedral, and more generally associated with the manufacture of Dutch pipes, is about fifteen miles from Rotterdam. Among the variety of pipes made there is one called the wedding pipe; it is three feet three inches long in the stem; the bowl is ornamental with coats-of-arms. The Dutch make festivals of the copper wedding, the silver wedding, the golden wedding and the diamond wedding. On the occasion of the copper wedding, the stem of the pipe is ornamented with copper leaves twining all the way up the stem, and at each successive festival the leaves are renewed according to the date of the commemoration, which seldom passes the golden. In Amsterdam I once saw a diamond-leaved pipe which had been prepared for a seventy-fifth wedding. Good Words.

The Mirage.

Swedenborg saw in a vision a great fire in Stockholm a hundred miles distant, and a Georgian farmer the other day, professes to have seen a mirage of a fire in Atlanta upon the clouds. He was astonished at a bright red glare that seemed to shine out and light up everything around, and, on looking up, he saw a terrible sight in the sky--a large red spot, in the middle of which he saw hundreds of men on horseback, and he saw a fire in the sky. He says he plainly saw streets crossing each other and railroads and trains of cars, but all appeared upside down.

NEARLY 7,000 immigrants landed in New York Monday.

The weather conditions through out most of the country have very decidedly improved since Saturday.

CHICAGO'S great Musical Festival will open Tuesday, May 23. It will be one of the great events of the year.

Tras for this year 2,508 miles of new railroad have been constructed in this country—more than twice the mileage constructed during the corresponding time last year or any preceding year.

STOKES, the murderer of Jim Fisk, has established an aesthetic bar-room in New York. He has filled it full of works of art and rare paintings, carpeted it with rugs, and made it one of the wonders of New York. Stokes has made a great deal of money dabbling in mining stocks, and this is one of his ways for spending it.

The highest railroad bridge in the world is now being built across Kin zua Creek, McKean county, Pa., four miles from the town of Alto, on a railroad which is to connect Buffalo, N. Y., and Pittsburgh, Pa. The bridge is at an altitude of 2100 feet above the sea level, and spans a chasm 2051 feet from the bottom, and is 301 feet from the bottom of the creek to the bottom of the rail. It is 45 feet higher than any bridge in America, and 80 feet higher than the suspension bridge at Niagara Falls. Four million pounds of iron will be consumed in its construction, and 7000 yards of masonry will be required. It is to be completed next August.

PERSONS AND THINGS.

Ex Governor Stanford, of California, will spend $1,000,000 on his vineyard.

Bishop Foss, of the Methodist Church, is in a critical state of health at St. Paul, Minnesota.

Mark Twain will pass the Summer at Elmira, N. Y., writing his book on the Mississippi river.

The old home of Henry Clay, in Lexington, Ky., has been sold for $60,000. It includes 324 acres of choice land.

Ex Senator Joseph Culley, of New Hampshire, now 91 years of age, has recovered from his recent severe illness.

Ex Secretary Blaine is said to have made $300,000 by investing in a Colorado mine which was sold in London recently.

Mr. Mackay, the California bonanza man, it is said, will build a hotel in London five times as large as any of the present London hotels.

Sonator Edmunds has arrived at Atlantic City, N. J., with his wife and invalid daughter, with the intention of making a protracted stay. Jay Gould "wears a pair of magnificent Florentine mosaic sleeve buttons, an inch and a quarter in diameter, surrounded with a border of costly set diamonds."

General Robert C. Schenck has been, it is said, cured of Bright's disease by the use of skinned milk. General Schenck believes it a specific for that disease.

Wendell Phillips is found in some things. For instance, he thinks it would be well to wait and find out who did assassinate Cavendish and Burke before charging anyone with the crime.

The city of Boston will give twenty four free open-air concerts during the Summer, divided among ten military bands. Sunday afternoon concerts will be given on the Common, beginning at 5 o'clock.

Political Gossip.

Alexander H. Stephens will be a candidate for the governorship of Georgia.

Oregon elects a governor and congressman on the 30th of June.

It is said that ex-Secretary Blaine, of Maine, won't run for congress this fall.

A movement is on foot in New York to induce Roscoe Conkling to run for congress.

Godlove S. Orth, of Indiana, who has served fourteen years in congress, is willing, and, in fact, anxious to serve another term.

Young "Bill" English, in Indiana, is not making a very strong canvass for congress against Mr. Peole, the present republican incumbent. William has a "bar" but the head of it is nailed down tight.

The senatorial contest in Illinois promises to be a lively one. Cullom, Hamilton and Rann have already "tossed their castors" into the ring, and there are numerous others preparing for the fray.

The select committee on woman's suffrage in the United States senate—Lapham, of New York, chairman—has agreed to report favorably the proposition to amend the constitution so as to permit women to vote. This fact, however, should not create an impression that congress is ready to adopt the recommendation.

ROBERT SMALL, colored, formerly a congressman from South Carolina, is the visiting lion among the colored people of Boston. During the war he ran a Charleston tug out of the harbor, and surrendered her to the authorities at Washington.

THE LAST OF HARBOR.

Will of an Octogenarian Not Yet Probated.

[A copy of this morocco was handed us to publish, with a request to omit the name.]

I, _____, of the state of Illinois, Macon county, being of sound mind and disposing memory, feeling the uncertainty of life, and knowing that with me the last of earth is in the near future, do not publish this as my last will and testament, hereby revoking all wills by me heretofore made, as I never made any; and, at the present writing, my hands having been my executor, have nothing to leave save this little scrap of paper containing a few thoughts, admonitions and requests. My race is nearly run. I have little else to do but to die, and I hope that I may be excused for expressing a dislike with the world for one thing. It is the detestable, isolated cases of double distilled selfishness. I think that man reared upon lactical fluid under the benevolent influence of his mother, should not be debased to inhuman despicable selfishness. Avarice of this class is not born with us, it is cultivated in some instances by accumulative wealth, and I believe that all the wants and woes and wealth of this life cannot demoralize a true man or woman. If I am in danger of vanity it is when I contemplate on this side of my disposition and character. "Man walketh in vain shadows." He heapeth up riches and cannot know who shall gather them." All should be energetic and try to make money straight; give employment to the poor at remunerative wages, and by act and example leave the world better than they found it. Open handed charity is the sovereign balm to conduce to our happiness here below. It is the only investment that pays more than legal interest to both the donor and the receiver.

"He shall wear a royal crown who gives mankind a lift when they are down." At no time have I been wealthy. I was not a lucky man; did not inherit or marry filthy lucre, and know little of the art of keeping money when I had a surplus; (please excuse an old man's egotism). I think that were I as rich as the sun I would be as generous as the day. To amass a fortune by practising meanly, mercenary, sordid, niggardly economy, with my soul frozen out, was foreign to my very nature, besides being a man of large proportions I could not obtain my consent to take shares of watered stock in the enterprise; the apex to the aperture was too small and the channel too long and crooked for me to enter such a contaminating arena. Had I been lucky I would have considered that I was my master's agent and ex-officio treasurer, and in the absence of instructions signed and sealed by him would have believed it to be my imperative duty to assist the poor and to give liberally to all churches and organizations whose motto is God and that word of word Charity."

Among the many commendable things taught in all these, is obedience to law and all that promotes good citizenship. Such institutions are public benefactors, they serve as mediators and will prosecute the evil day coming when this grand country, free for all, go as you please, this asylum for the oppressed, the greatest nation the sun ever shown upon, which will with its unlimited influx of immigration in time deteriorate and be governed by the bayonet and sword. I feel that I and men of my age have had the cream of this government and admonish those I leave behind that the rigid enforcement of the laws is the only remedy to prolong the approaching crisis. When I go the way of all on earth and the heartless stereo typed question is asked: "What property did he leave behind, and who is to be the recipient?" I hope that those who know me best will answer by recounting the good deeds I have done—omitting the bad ones, and state that I was entitled to the epitaph: "He had a loyal heart and hand, that could feel and give." I aspire to no higher encomium. In taking a retrospective view of the varied scenes I have passed through I invariably exclaim "Lord what a man; what a bustling bundle of passions, appetites, ideas and fancies, and what a capricious kind of existence he has here. There is indeed an elsewhere!" As old age came creeping on I found the gall oozing out by degrees and being replaced with charity. Although in Shakespeare's seventh age of man and like an old wagon sent to the shop for repairs, I am not as forgiving as I should be, still I hope to live until there is not a vestige of worm word in my make up and can "wipe all tears from all eyes," and say in truth that I leave earth with malice toward none and charity for all, and be fully confirmed in my present belief "That all this matchless universe came from a creator and that from him we also came." It has been my solace for many years and in the absence of that faith and hope in the dark silent hour of death's gloom, there will break forth no bright star. If death be an eternal sleep then I deem of all the creatures that ever existed, that of the human family is the saddest and greatest failure. Every man and every woman should embrace this hope in early life and cultivate the thought in their children. Do not wait until the death bed or on the gulf. When the battle of life on earth is ended with me, I imperatively direct that my body be watched forty-eight hours or longer if it is not positively and clearly known that dissolution has taken place. I request that a committee of my masonic brethren confer with the family in regard to the ceremonies, they knowing my views. I request that there be no ostentatious display; that a slight way of transportation be furnished, dispensing with gorgeously caparisoned match horses and plumed hearse. No parade, no band of music, no resolutions published. Upon arrival at the narrow house for my body, and the Masonic rites closed, the family and friends are to repair to their respective homes and leave the interment to the committee and the sexton. My family are not to wear any emblem of mourning, to pursue their usual vocations and indulge in their customary amusements in moderation. Let none mourn for me—no, not one. It is a thing of life to be born, a thing of life to live and equally so to leave earth. All the world's a stage, and all the men and women are merely players. They have their exits and entrances. Only one old worn out actor goes behind the scenery. Statistics prove that the instant any soul leaves the body, one and two fifths more souls are ushered into the world to play their great part in the drama of life. I know not how well I have played my part. I have tried to keep the faith; no one is infallible. A man cannot write a divorce to his vice. Let none on earth pass sentence. It is not in the province of any outsider, layman, parson, priest or pope to sit in judgment. A higher power will decide. I am no saint. I have a whole host of follies and sins to answer for. Yet I have a comfortable assurance that I will be dealt with mercifully. The Lord is my Shepherd.

With a climate which might produce an endless variety for every month in the year, the Brazilian raises only a little corn, a few tomatoes, squashes and watermelons. Common groceries are sold at enormous prices. Fruit is abundant and very cheap. Bananas and the plantain or pacaia can always be had, while oranges are sold at 8 cents a bushel at the trees. Many other fruits, such as apples and peaches, alligator pears, pineapples, mangoes, papaya, guavas and custappas, are given away or cost almost nothing.

DREADFUL DISASTER.

Eight Persons Drowned in Pullman Lake near Chicago.

WASHINGTON, D. C., May 15.—It is learned positively that the supreme court of the district will on Monday next render a unanimous decision affirming the decision of the court below in the Guitane case.

Shipyard has been summoned to appear before the foreign affairs committee next Wednesday.

Judge Wylie has directed the grand jury to receive as evidence certain reports submitted by Woodward, the special agent in the star route cases, and his statements concerning them.

Congressman Davis was tendered a handsome compliment this morning, being appointed by the speaker of the house on the congressional committee to visit and inspect West Point.

The vote in the house to-day shows a determined opposition on the part of the democrats to the proposition to strengthen the militia of all the states in the national organization giving the president power to appoint officers. All the democrats voted against it, as did a few republicans, and it was defeated.

The president is experiencing great difficulty in selecting the tariff commission. The majority will be moderate protectionists, and probably ex-Secretary Kirkwood will be Chairman.

Mr. Teller's course relating to the Indians is meeting with general approval, and it is believed that life in the Indian country will be rendered more nearly safe under his course than ever before.

It is said that Blaine is supporting Senator Mitchell in his revolt against the stalwarts in Pennsylvania, and that he will be also heard from in the canvass in Ohio, New York and many other states, making things lively for the stalwarts generally.

WASHINGTON, May 15.—The House passed a bill to-day of great importance to farming communities in the West. The bill was introduced by Mr. Burrows, of Michigan, to protect persons who have innocently purchased patented articles. Mr. Burrows explained that parties of rascals have a way of traveling through the rural districts selling patented articles, after which the owner of the patent follows, threatening buyers with suits. The bill provides that no action for damages or proceeding in equity shall be sustained, nor shall a party be held liable under Sections 4,919 or 4,921, Revised Statutes, for the use of any patented article or device, unless it shall appear on trial that the defendant in such action or proceeding purchased said article for a valuable consideration in open market.

WASHINGTON, D. C., May 15.—A special from Cumberland, Md., says that Frank Brady, an important witness in the Morley letter case, has gone to New York, and will, it is understood, testify thereto what he knows about the connection of certain Cumberland politicians with the letter. Correspondent Brady is said to be the man who went before W. M. Price and offered to swear to an affidavit that he was Robt. Lindsay.

The next day Brady backed out and refused to swear before a magistrate, when James O'Brien, of Washington, was induced to swear to a similar affidavit, which was forwarded to Barnum the day before the election.

Davenport has obtained from W. H. Barnum the original affidavit of the fictitious Robert Lindsay, in handwriting of Price, also Price's receipts for money received from Barnum and other original papers.

CHICAGO, May 15.—A special from Pullman, Ill., at 10 a. m., says: The most distressing accident that has yet happened in Pullman occurred about 7 o'clock Sunday night. A sailing boat with eight persons on board capsized in the lake and all were drowned. The boat was a small craft used by Pullman people for pleasure excursions, and at the time mentioned had on board a party consisting of Capt. Bucklin, an old sea captain, recently from Maine, his two sons, boys of 17 and 12 years of age, John Smith, foreman in the car department, and four men whose names cannot at present be ascertained.

CHICAGO, May 15.—The society of the Army of the Cumberland propose a contribution on Decoration Day toward the erection in Washington of a statue of President Garfield, who was so conspicuous a member of that army. Contributions may be made through associated press papers or sent to Lieut. Gen. Sheridan, Chicago; H. C. Corbin, Asst. Adt. Gen., Washington, D. C.

PICKENVILLE, ILL., May 15.—In the circuit court of this (Perry) county, on last Saturday, James K. Vaughn was sentenced to be hanged on June 16 for the murder of the marshal of Tamaroa over a year ago. He took the sentence in a remarkably cool manner, and viewed the 400 people in the court room with seeming indifference.

EUREKA SPRING, May 15.—The remains of George Washburne left here for LaRocque this morning. There were services at the Perry House at 8 o'clock this morning. Prayer was offered by Rev. Mr. McElwain, of the Presbyterian church, when the choir sang "Sweet By and By."

Wonderful Growth.

One of the most progressive States in the Union, commercially, is Oregon. Its wonderful climate along the coast is known far and wide and attracts the enterprising settler from all parts of the world. Its industries are varied and its wealth is rapidly increasing. In 1850 its population stood at 13,294; last year it was 174,767. Of wheat 1,340,740 bushels were raised in 1870, and in 1880 7,480,010 bushels. Nine years ago there were not more than 82 miles of railroad in the state; to-day the mileage is 900. There are 2,115 bona fide commercial establishments in the state, having a capital of $9,872,400, possessing real estate valued at $3,569,700, giving a total wealth of $13,500,957. Of manufacturing establishments there are 1,030, employing 5,577 hands, having $5,490,850 of capital invested, paying annually $1,741,359 in wages, and producing annually $10,219,000 worth of material.

Being of a legal turn of mind David Davis is gratified to learn that he was not put together without precedent. Balzoo was round as a hog's head, children playing "I spy" about him, making desperate runs from one side of him to the other to touch base; Rossini could only see his knees by the aid of a looking glass; Labache had to pay three fares whenever he traveled, and Jules Janin crushed sofas like paper boxes when he sat on them.

THE SILENT CITY.

An Afternoon Visit to Greenwood Cemetery, and What was Seen and Noted.

On Monday afternoon, in company with Mr. Jesse Bendure, the sexton, a Republican reporter visited Greenwood Cemetery, one of the most beautiful natural burying grounds in the State, in which lay the bodies of over 2,000 persons who "sleep the sleep that knows no waking."

The city of the dead, with its glistening monuments was found attired in its beautiful garb of green, with here and there a blooming plant placed in the soft earth on the rounded graves by a sorrowing mother or relative of the departed.

The grounds, which are quite extensive, were found to be free of rubbish of any character, and an air of cleanliness pervaded the cemetery that spoke volumes for the good taste and industry of the sexton in charge. The tall grass on many lots has been cut, and a force of six men are now improving that recently cut the eye of the visitor as he rides or walks through the attractive grounds. The drives are kept in perfect repair at all seasons of the year.

NEW MONUMENTS.

The attention of the reporter was called to the new monuments which have recently been placed in the cemetery. They are mostly of American granite, and range in cost from $400 to $1,500 each. The more noticeable ones are on the John Ulrich, A. J. Gallagher, W. H. Fanning, John Slaughter, E. A. Stroth, H. H. Bishop, Samuel Powers, William Sawyer, Benj. Sawyer, Samuel Rea, Ira A. Barnes, W. F. Busher and Henry Bishop lots.

The total cost of these thirteen monuments looks up $10,850. We learn that Mr. Geo. D. Haworth will soon put a magnificent monument worth several thousand dollars on his lot.

THE VETERANS' BURIAL GROUND.

In the western part of the grounds will be found the space donated by the cemetery association to the Macon County Veterans' Association for the interment of the dead heroes. The lot is 33 by 62 feet in size, and affords space for the burial of about 500 bodies. The lot is now being properly improved, and will be marked by a tall flagstaff purchased by the veterans, from which will be unfurled the stars and stripes. The headstones ordered for the soldiers' graves will be received in due time, and they will then be placed in proper position.

A $7,000 VAULT.

It is the purpose of Mr. John R. Miller to build a large family vault in the new part of the cemetery, about 60 feet north and east of the entrance to the grounds. In this vault, which will cost in the neighborhood of $7,000 or $8,000, will be placed the remains of the late Jacob H. Miller, whose body is yet in the old vault; and the other members of the family will be placed in it as they pass away.

The present commendable state of the grounds is mainly due to the good judgment and industry of Mr. Bendure, who is certainly the right man in the right place. He is the best sexton the association has ever had and well merits the volunteer praise he receives from all visitors.

Roland Reed in Cheek.

The favorite comedian, Roland Reed, who was several years the funniest feature of the old stock company, at McVicker's, later figured as the star in "An Arabian Night," and again was responsible for much of the success of the "World," in Chicago, has struck it rich in a new play called "Cheek," written expressly for him by Fred Marsden, author of the Lotta successes. The play was produced for the first time on any stage at Hooley's, in Chicago, last week, and scored an unequivocal success. The manager has wisely not depended solely upon Mr. Reed's talents, but has surrounded him with a superb company, including Jennie Yeamans, the dashing soubrette, Agnes Herndon, the popular leading lady, W. A. Whitecar, of Edwin Booth's company of this season, E. B. Norman, the well-known old man actor, and others of reputation. This exceedingly well balanced comedy combination will appear before the footlights in Decatur on THURSDAY night—next Friday, as incorrectly stated last evening—and play for the benefit of the opera house ushers. Popular prices. Severe reserved seat tickets at once.

Yes, we have lots of literary folks about here, or at least some that would be. Also several two-penny reporters for our local papers, but that is nothing out of the way, is it? For one should not monopolize the whole of a thriving little town like ours. Some of them do write a heap of stuff when spring just right, and they cut right and left, awful promiscuous like. Their productions sometimes make a fellow feel all broke up. Now, we never pride ourselves much on our personal appearance, but then we did not think it was half so bad as U. N. O.'s last makes us out; but in such matters one may be an inconspicuous judge of himself. Suppose the old gentleman did live with us thirty years, we look him off at last and build a house of our own, you know, that's the way to do when you get married and have some style about you. But after all we would like for U. N. O. to be sure he is not "barking up the wrong tree," and not so reckless. So mend your quill and give 'em hell.
